

129 ACCEPTED HERE FOR OFFICERS' CAMP

Number Probably Will Be Cut Down by Commander at Fort Riley.

MEN MAY BE PAID

Local Office Sets High Record—Many From Other Cities Passed Here.

About a hundred and twenty impatient prospective officers of the United States Army are waiting in and around Columbia for orders from Colonel Tyree R. Rivers, commandant of the training camp at Fort Riley, to report for three months' training.
One hundred and twenty-five men have been passed by the local examining board, but a few are now at their homes in various part of the state.

The hardest thing to impress upon the applicant is that he is not to go to Fort Riley until he receives personal notice that the commander of the camp has accepted him, according to Captain J. C. King. Several men left before they learned that the time of opening the camp had been changed from May 8 to May 14. One man spent about $5 for transportation home and then telephoned to Fort Riley to find out if they were waiting for him. The commander told him to go back to school. He is now attending classes and waiting for his orders.

Orders to Report Not Yet Received.

Men who are accepted will be ordered to report between May 8 and 14. Captain King said late yesterday afternoon that he knew of no one who had yet received word to report.
The men will have to pay their own transportation to Fort Riley, but will be reimbursed when they arrive for the fare from the place where their applications were accepted.

The Civilian Training Camps Association has done its work well around Columbia. Local representatives of the association have found men of high quality, he said. Delegations from Jefferson City, Mexico and Fulton came to Columbia to be examined yesterday. Their applications were approved by the commanding general of the Central Department at Chicago. There are forty-three applications in the office of the Military School in the basement of Academic Hall, now waiting for the men to come for examination.

Men May Receive $100 a Month.

The men who go to the officers' training camp at Fort Riley, Kan., will probably receive $100 a month, besides their board and lodging, according to a dispatch from Washington. Conferees from the House and Senate who have been considering the $280,000,000 Army Appropriation Bill favored the proposal made Thursday

HIGH SCHOOL TEACHERS MEET

New Plan of Vocational Education Subject of Discussion.

Vocational education in Missouri under the Smith-Hughes Act was the subject of the discussion at the Annual Conference of teachers in the Accredited High Schools of Missouri at 8:30 o'clock Saturday morning in the University Auditorium. Of the nine states that were ready to take advantage of this act in March, Missouri was first.

This act is a provision of the Federal government that aims to encourage education in agriculture, commerce, the industries and homemaking. The Federal government pays salaries of teachers of those subjects in secondary schools. If the fund deposited with the State Board of Education does not exceed the total sum available from the Federal government approved schools will get one dollar from the Federal government for teachers salaries for each dollar they contribute.
Higher state educational institutions may profit similarly by a fund for training of these teachers.

"The law," said Dean Isidor Loeb, "offers vast possibilities for the establishment of an intellectual and sympathetic system of education that will include both preparation for college education and the vocations of life."

"To affiliate with this federal movement the last legislature passed a law to promote vocational education," said Prof. J. D. Elliff. "The administration of this law will include the organization and administration of courses of study that the law makes necessary and the determinations of the qualifications of the teachers. The qualifications will differ from those of the regular teachers in our high schools."

C. A. Phillips, dean of the Faculty and professor of education in the Warrensburg State Normal School, says that through this law the federal government has sanctioned vocational education at high school level for all of the people. "This," he said, "will increase the high school attendance 100 per cent."

The largest apportionment for the industries other than agriculture will go to the city schools but that of agriculture will go to the rural schools.
